

10. The occurrence of an indicative mood verb in the conditional clause of a sentence of condition indicates that (a) the condition is in the area of fact or reality (b) the condition is something not likely to happen (c) the condition may be met at some time in the future (d) you need more data to have a reasonable idea of what to expect.

---

Part I. Section C---

Oh, to be young again and be able to remember this stuff:

1. Write the declension of the Feminine article, singular and plural

2. Write the dative plural forms for the participle of "to be" (all genders)

εἶπε

3. Write the Imperfect Indicative Active of εἶπε.

And that is all there is to Part I...review your work, if you wish, and turn it into the Instructor and Pick up part II...or, if the Instructor is not readily seen, just put it on the table in the designated place!