the City of Destruction. Could it be Heliopolis? Well, you will have to play with that for awhile. You can bother Dr. Newman with that. He is the authority on ancient Egyptian names, sites and towns. But, it might well be the City of the Sun. It might well be. But one of them, he says, will really be called -   Now, there are as many specific points in that verse as you will see in most prophecies. You see the specific points. There will be five cities, not six, not four. There will be five. They will speak the language of Canaan. The suggestion is that the other cities don't. That might not be proveable, but it is a suggestion, and one of those five will be called the City of Destruction. There are three enormously specific things.

Well, you will find it hard to find evidences of fulfillment of any one of them. Maybe the time is not yet. We will look at that in a minute. I just mention that right now you will find it hard to find a fulfillment.

Student: Is this another _____

Mr. Taylor: I think that the emphasis of _E chad_ is one out of the five, will be called. I am not sure that that can be proved either. You know fellows say a lot in class that if you say can it be proved definitely, _____

_____ But certainly the _____ is that it is one of those five.

Student --Mr. S.: _____

Mr. Taylor: Hebrew or Aramaic were the standard suggestions.

Student - Mr. Meyers: That language must be the language of Canaan because of the take over, the Hebrew was supplanted, but the next phrase "swearing to the Lord of Hosts" seems to indicate a spiritual _ --

Mr. Taylor: Yes. It seems to indicate not just a military governors there who will say, Everybody in the city will talk my language.   It's not a _____ _____ type of thing. It seems to imply a knowledge of God. Well, I can't solve that immediately. Right.

Another Student: There is some unfulfilled prophecy that comes by the way that they were conditional, but youhaven't mentioned these at all. You are just leaving that to one side.
