

present-day advertisers do not hesitate to ask the public to allow their products to speak for themselves, we may follow the same procedure. If one will trust Christ as Saviour, his other doubts in biblical areas will be put in order and the continued working of God's Word in his life will be a lasting testimony of truth.

We cannot, in a sense, prove the Bible. But in areas of evidence we are able to demonstrate that the Bible is true. This should lend credence to the entire Word. If some object that the accuracy of historical facts does not make the spiritual message true, we only say that it all comes from God. The tangible areas support the intangible. In its character and composition the Bible is God's book and must be accepted as from, and having its authority in, Him.
