(2) The "Churches of God"

Some of these belong to the Pentacostal or Holiness bodies and some do not. Most have in common the idea that the individual body encompasses all of the Christians hence no further name is necessary.

(3) The "Plymouth Brethren"

A widely flung group with several orders of ecclesiastical ideals but all having in common the idea of being "not a sect" but representative of the church total.

(4) Beyond these groups you will find a number of associations and individual fellowships who make the same claim. All are mistaken in thinking of themselves as non-sectarian... and I will try to tell you why.
