

III. The Lesson: We may see it in these four heads all of which have a common thrust:

- A. Let prayer be fervent
- B. Let it be in Jesus Name (John 14, etc)
- C. Let it be expectant
- D. Let it be with praise

(Editor's Note: This note is a commentary in 2002 and simply expressed the fact that these are not the only humanitarian parables but are the ones I selected for the study: They teach us, as regards others, to:

- Be good neighbors
- Avoid greed, selfishness
- Forgive and Love
- Take the message to all
- Prayer (for all things) for the working of God in the needs of our lives and those of others.

My notes indicate that Will Miller was here this week as well, ministering from Nehemiah. I have a number of points marked in my outline for reference to things he had said or taught in his messages.

And a note or two on Conference life...I would like to add a lot but that is not the purpose of this work.....however we always had a talent night at Skylands and at some point George Walker (missionary from Cuba) and Arthur Goyena (Brooklyn) and I got to playing harmonica trios for talent night. We were not particularly good but at least that made us a part of the program and the gyrations of Mr. Goyena and the foot stomping of Mr. Walker soon earned us a reputation not soon to be forgotten. Brother Walker moved to heaven and Arthur and I still play whenever the staff forgets how we sounded. The old saying is true: it's better to have tried to play and made the audience sad than to have refused to play and made yourself sad. I am not sure that agrees with the humanitarian work but I understand it and this is just an inserted momento.
